J. W. LANGLEY ANSWERS BYRD

me in this race. I have here the affidavit of Mr. Will H. Auxier, Census Enumerator for the enumeration precinct in which I reside, in which he swears that I willingly gave him my census list at Pikeville. I also have here the certificate of Mr. J. F. Pauley, of Pikeville, the Census Supervisor for this Congressional District. I will read that. No, I see that Mr. Pauley has just arrived from Pikeville. Mr. Pauley, did I or did I not give my census schedule to your enumerator at Pikeville?

Mr. Pauley: You did. (Applause.) Mr. Byrd has intimated that I subsequently fixed up this schedule when I found out that it was going to be used against me. Was it given at the time that the other schedules were taken by the enumerator?

Mr. Pauley: It was. (Applause.) And was it or was it not sent on to Washington with your report last spring along with the other schedules?

Mr. Pauley: It was. (Applause.) Now, Mr. Byrd, you have violated one of the rules of evidence, which is, that secondary evidence cannot be produced when primary evidence is available. Not only that, but you have sought to mislead the people by hearsay testimony, when you could have gone or sent to Pikeville and verified the report that had been made to you. Why didn't you send "Sonny" Stafford over there? He is not doing you any good where he is. (Loud applause and laughter.) Or you might have sent your friend, Bill May, up there. He has finished his triumphant tour of the District, along with "Sonny." (Applause), and sometimes they had as many as forty and fifty people to hear them speak. (Laughter.)

Mr. Byrd, you are the nominee of a great political party. You have charged me here with something that I have conclusively disproved. I hope you were misled about this matter. But if you were not, if I were you, I would get a pand admit to this crowd that I had misrepresented my opponent, and I would go back to the other places where I had made the same statement and apologize to the people there for misrepresenting him. And if you don't do it, you ought to withdraw from this race, and if you refuse to do either, the people will attend to it on the 8th of November.

Another thing: I have a stenographic report of Mr. Byrd's speech at West Liberty. Among other things he said: "Mr. Langley has no interests in common with the people of the District, and I am told"—hearsay evidence again—(Laughter)—"I am told by the people of that county that during all these years he has paid no taxes and that he had paid them only for the last year." Why, Mr. Byrd, I only moved to Pike county about two years ago. I have paid my taxes three for there for the first year and have been assessed for the second year, and I hope and believe I will pay the assessment when it comes due. (Applause.)

Mr. Byrd says that I am not a lawyer. Well, the people know me here too well and my history too well to dispute about that. I attended the law schools for eight years in Washington, receiving the first prize in two of them, and had conferred upon me all of the degrees that the universities of the country confer. I got this education by night study. I came home and practiced law—not as much as Mr. Byrd has practiced, it is true—but I practiced law, and for several years I was chief law officer of one of the great bureaus in Washington. He says that I never had a case in court in my life. Why, Mr. Byrd, the court records are right here within thirty feet of where I am standing. You can find three scores of cases on the record, where I was the attorney of record, when I was located here in the practice of law. Why did you not examine those records and get the facts, instead of permitting somebody to make such a statement as you have made. Of course, you are a good lawyer, Mr. Byrd. Nobody questions that. And that is one reason why the people are going to keep you on the job. They don't want to spoil a good lawyer in order to make a poor Congressman. (Loud Applause.)

You said at West Liberty, according to this certified copy of your remarks which I have here, (and you said practically the same thing a while ago) that I introduced a bill proposing to pension Confederate soldiers, that it was pigeon-holed by the Committee and that I never tried to have it brought to light again; and that I only introduced this bill to try to rob the old Confederate soldiers of their votes and deceive them. These are pretty serious words, Mr.

Byrd. They mean, if they mean anything, that the Representative of this District, acting upon the oath of office and his conscience, has deliberately introduced a measure and had it killed in the Committee, and that he has been playing double with the people merely for the purpose of getting their votes. If what you say about this Confederate bill is correct, then I not only ought not to be re-elected, but I ought to be expelled from the House of Representatives. If I introduced such a bill, it is necessarily of record. There is only one man who could deserve greater condemnation at the hands of the people than such a Representative, and that is the man who will charge that Representative with such a serious thing and fail to produce the evidence to support his charge. (Loud Applause.) Now, Mr. Byrd, it is two weeks from today until the election day. You have plenty of time to get the record from Washington and produce it to the people. You can send "Sonny" or Bill up there after it, if you are too busy yourself. (Laughter.) Bring the record here. Prove what you say, and I say now, in the presence of these thousands of people, that I will withdraw from this race. If you fail to do that, you ought to go back to West Liberty and the other places where you have made this statement, and apologize to them for having misrepresented me and my record in Congress. Now, I will tell you what I did do.

In the first place, I have taken the position that after the lapse of nearly half a century, the old prejudice of the war should be forgotten. I have contended that the law barring pensions to Union soldiers, on account of a prior Confederate service should be repealed, and I tried to have it repealed. I aided in the passage of a resolution giving the old Confederate soldiers two years more time in which to file claims for horses, saddles and bridles taken from them at the close of the war in violation of the terms of surrender, and making the sum of about twenty-five thousand dollars, which has been lying idle in the Treasury for some years, available to pay these claims and it was upon my motion that this resolution passed the House of Representatives. It has been signed by the President and is now a law. This resolution will help a good many old Confederate soldiers. It will only give them a small amount of money, it is true—a hundred dollars or so—but it will help them some. I shall charitably assume that you had this resolution in mind when you were speaking about the Confederate pensions, although you ought to have posted yourself before undertaking to speak about it. The trouble about Mr. Byrd is, ladies and gentlemen, he doesn't seem to understand the difference between a pension claim and a horse claim. (Loud Applause) and until he does, he has no business representing this District which has so many soldiers in it. (Applause.)

Mr. Byrd, you used this language in your speech at West Liberty, referring to the case of Mr. David Fannin, of Elliott county, whose pardon I recently assisted in getting the Governor to grant: "The pardon is finally issued. It does not go to the man who is indicted, but it is addressed to Honorable John W. Langley. The pardon comes to him, instead of to the man who needs it, and Mr. Langley takes that to the poor unfortunate man and says, 'If you vote for me, you get the pardon; if you don't vote for me, you don't get the pardon.' He takes advantage of that man's misfortune."

I have here the affidavit of Mr. David Fannin absolutely repudiating this statement of Mr. Byrd. The affidavit is as follows: State of Kentucky Set.

The affiant, Dave Fannin, says that he has read an extract from Mr. Byrd's speech at West Liberty, October 8th, in which Mr. Byrd said that Mr. Langley came to him (Fannin) and said, after letting him know that he had him a pardon: "If you vote for me, you get the pardon, if you don't vote for me, you don't get the pardon." The affiant says that no such conversation occurred and Mr. Langley made no such demand of him; that Mr. Langley took up the case and got the pardon without ever having an interview with him at all, and that the pardon was delivered to affiant before Mr. Langley saw him here at Sandy Hook and that Mr. Langley never asked him to vote for him or to do anything for him because of the fact that he got the pardon. (Signed) DAVID FANNIN.

Subscribed and sworn to by Dave Fannin before me this 20th day of October, 1910. My commission expires January 24th, 1912. (Signed) J. H. WEDDINGTON, N. P. E. C.

Mr. Byrd, you are not going to get any considerable majority in Elliott county, (and I have here a letter from Mr. Hopkins, authorizing me to deny your assertions.) (Applause.) You have charged me with confining my efforts to help the soldiers to the cases of those who vote the Republican ticket and of favoring pension legislation only for that purpose. The soldiers of this district know that I have worked for them without regard to politics. I have secured the passage of special acts for Democratic soldiers and I have worked unceasingly to aid them in presenting their claims at the Pension office, and I have done this without regard to politics. You say in a letter you have here, which you are addressing to the soldiers, that, if elected, you will do what you can to get them the pensions to which they are not genuine, you will never get any majority in Elliott county. (Applause.) If this affidavit is true, what does it mean? It means that you have charged me with infamous conduct, conduct that is unworthy of any man. You have charged me, your friend, with that sort of conduct and I have here fully disproved it. It is your duty as an honorable man to go back to the people to whom you have made this statement and apologize to them for having misled them. Say, if you wish to, that others misled you into making the statement. I hope that is true. You cannot win a race that way, Mr. Byrd. The people believe in fair and square dealing. You cannot win a race either before the people, by springing, at the last hours of the campaign, something that your opponent has not a chance to answer.

You said at West Liberty, and you repeated it again here today, that I am opposed to the income tax and that I have been fighting it and working against it ever since I have been in Congress. Why, Mr. Byrd, I have always been in favor of the income tax and nearly eighteen months ago in the House of Representatives at Washington, I spoke in support of it. I have here a copy of my speech thousands of which are being circulated in the District. Here, take this copy and read it. (Applause and laughter.) It will do you good and give you some valuable information on the subject.

You say that I announced at Pikeville that you were against the lumber trust and that I was in favor of it and that I said that the lumber trust is saving the people of this country. Why, Mr. Byrd, I have not yet made a speech in this campaign at Pikeville, or in Pike county, and I never said any such thing anywhere. (Applause.) I am just as much opposed to trusts as you are. What I did say was that I favored that sort of legislation that will make the price of our lumber just as high as possible, because we have lumber to sell and we want a good price for it; and so do the laborers who are employed in the lumber business, because that means more wages for them.

You said at West Liberty and at other points in the District that I had made promises in Clark county that I had not kept, and you say that they have written evidence of that promise signed by me. Of course you refer to the contest over the post office there, which was recently settled by the appointment of Mr. White. The duty devolved upon me of making a recommendation in the case. I carefully considered all the endorsements. I gave much time and thought to this case, and I acted in accordance with my best judgment considering the whole situation. You say that I made a written promise to appoint a certain applicant there and that I violated the promise, or rather you say, "they say I did." Do you realize, Mr. Byrd, that such a charge involves a man's integrity and that such a charge should not be made unless you know it to be true? It is two weeks yet until the election. You have plenty of time to produce that written promise, if you are telling the truth about it. If you can produce such a promise signed by me, I will agree to withdraw from this race. You cannot produce it because I never gave it, and therefore it does not exist. (Applause.)

You say that I am claiming all the credit for the appropriation for the public building at Winchester. I have not done so. Mr. Hopkins, my immediate predecessor, secured an appropriation of forty-five thousand dollars, and I am willing to give him credit for what little he did while he was in Congress. (Laughter.) I got that increased to seventy thousand dollars and introduced a bill to increase it to one hundred thousand, and promised that it should be done if I could aid in bringing it about. Senators Paynter and Bradley got an additional item of thirty thousand dollars inserted in the Senate, and through my efforts that item was passed by the House. These are the facts, and that is all I have ever claimed.

Now, here is another thing that you have been claiming, that I have the evidence here to refute. You say that ex-Congressman N. T. Hopkins is for you and is going to take the stump for you. I have here a letter from Mr. Hopkins, authorizing me to deny your assertions. (Applause.) You have charged me with confining my efforts to help the soldiers to the cases of those who vote the Republican ticket and of favoring pension legislation only for that purpose. The soldiers of this district know that I have worked for them without regard to politics. I have secured the passage of special acts for Democratic soldiers and I have worked unceasingly to aid them in presenting their claims at the Pension office, and I have done this without regard to politics. You say in a letter you have here, which you are addressing to the soldiers, that, if elected, you will do what you can to get them the pensions to which they are not genuine, you will never get any majority in Elliott county. (Applause.) If this affidavit is true, what does it mean? It means that you have charged me with infamous conduct, conduct that is unworthy of any man. You have charged me, your friend, with that sort of conduct and I have here fully disproved it. are entitled under existing law. Remember that, friends. He says, "under existing law." Observe that he carefully avoids committing himself to any amendment to the pension law, just as his platform avoids promising anything on that score. He does not even propose to support the proposition recently endorsed by the Grand Army of the Republic to increase the pension rate under the age law, to twenty dollars at seventy years of age, and twenty-five dollars at seventy-five years of age. He says he will work to get you what you are entitled to under existing law. I have had nearly ten years of experience as an employee of the Government service that I thoroughly understand, it is the pension work. And I submit to you whether I can be of more service to you in presenting your claims than a man who knows nothing about the work.

I have tried to make this campaign on a high and honorable plane. I have not indulged in personalities. I have scrupulously avoided making any statement that would misrepresent you in the slightest degree. I have endeavored to confine myself to a discussion of the issues and a recital of the facts. On the other hand you have made, as I have already shown, nearly a dozen statements about me and my record, which I have contradicted by indisputable evidence. The people believe in fair dealing. If I were in your situation today, I would frankly acknowledge that I had been misled about these matters, and then take my chances with the voters. If you don't do that, you will, in my judgment, be buried beneath an avalanche of votes cast by the people of this district, regardless of politics, who believe in a square deal.
